

all zipped up

Here's a clever idea – a smart work shirt with invisible zips that allow easy access for feeding a baby, without awkward fumbling with outer layers. The long-sleeved fitted shirt from Mummy Honey is made from a super-soft bamboo and cotton blend. RRP$117 from www.mummyhoney.com.au.

style in a basket

If pink bunnies and blue teddies are not your idea of style look no further than the Bebelicious Moses baskets for your babe. The new collection has some gorgeous prints, again in the 1950s-inspired designs from Jennifer Catton at Bebelicious. The full set for $299 includes a large-size hand-woven Moses basket, mattress, basket liner, two sheet sets and bamboo fleece blanket. Go to www.bebelicious.co.nz.

hang loose

Getting youngsters to help tidy up gets a whole lot easier with this play mat and toy bag in one, AU$37.95 to AU$44.50 (The tree is AU$295). Play with the toys on the mat, scoop everything up, fasten with a drawcord and hang up. Go to www.fruut.net.

1, 2, 3... it's all about me

For your child's brain to grow in their first three years they need:

- Secure attachment relationships
- A settled home environment
- Natural play and learning

More and more New Zealand parents are choosing PORSE – You can too!

Find out more about the fastest growing sector in early childhood education where parents are choosing a relationship-based in-home childcare programme to maximise early learning.

PORSE provides all educators and parents with free training programmes to learn more about early brain development and secure attachment relationships.

Together we are making a difference for young children in New Zealand.
